This is why all conceivable social purpossure should be put behind the roll-back campaign. If it is true that the economic struggle it for survival is no less important than the political struggle, it follows that those whe wouldn't hesitate to sacrifice their lives should be expected to sacrifice some of their profits as well.

Mr Marquis Childa, "New York Post" columnist writing from New Delhi, said today that he heard disturbing reports of American arma provided as military sid to countries in the region, being secretly sold to Arab League states preparing to challenge Israel.

Such reports could not be verified short of lengthy on-the-spot investigation, he declared, but they are symptomatic of the divided loyalties that cast further doubt on the value of these alliances.

After referring to Rules 60 to be onclusion that, despite many reservations, particularly with regard to matters of perspondent should not be changed in the judgment unless the parties had been allowed to plead their case in that connection. The correct procedure would have been for the plaintiff to have asked the court to change the name of the defendant to which undoubtedly the court would have agreed R is not a healthy practice, continued the Justice, for a judge, in his judgment, to rectify an error committed by the plaintiff, with regard to the name of the defendant to to this general rule since it was clear from all the facts that both parties knew that the correct mans of the defendant was that used in the judgment. In addition, the appellants (defendants in the lower court) were in the habit of using alternatively the name which appeared in the statement of claims and that which appeared in the judgment. The Law of the Flag Turning to Mr. Kahn's second

From the facts before the court, Just'e Gottein said, all that was clear was that the bill of lading was sent on the ship "Aristoteles," that the goods were despatched from Costa Rica by a Costa Rican firm and that the shipping company was Panamanian — all of which did not help to establish the identity of the flag of the ship or the country of registration, and thereby the foreign law applicable to the case. For this reason, the second argument of the appeliants should also be dismissed. This reason, however, was different from that gives by Judge Cohen, who had dismissed the same argument on the grounds that, as the foreign law had not been proved, then on the presumption of identity of laws, Israel law should be applied.

Bince the question of identity of laws, Israel law should be applied.

Bince the question of identity of laws, Israel law should be applied.

Since the question of identity of laws, Israel law should be applied.

Cohen (with justification, since the question had not been mooted by the parties) Justice Gottein proceeded to give a comprehensive picture of the application of this legal fiction in English and American law, pointing out that the Americans had narrowed down their application of the principle to cases where the foreign law is presumption was applied widely and unrestrictedly. Since in Israel the principles of English, and not American, law are applied unrestrictedly. Since in Israel the principles of English, and not American, is were applied in the Supreme Court, the Justice came to local precedents, how this presumption had been applied.

After showing, by reference to local precedents, how the presumption had been applied in the Supreme Court, the Justice came to the conclusion that, despite many reservations, particularly with regard to matters of personal status, Israeli courts had accepted in principle the English rule of presumption of identity of laws.

Weizmann Institute Given Rare Geophysics Books

REHOVOT.— A gift of rare volumes on geophysics which are now out of print has been made to the Weismann Institute of Science by the Princeton University Observator; it is announced here by Mr. Meyer W. Weisgal, Chairman of the Institute's Executive Council.

For some time past the Weismann Institute had been trying to acquire for its library collections, the Geophysical Eupplement of the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society in Great Britain. These books are needed by the Institute's Department of Applied Mathematics for its geophysical research programme in consection with the investigation of possible oil-bearing sites and deeplying water horizons in Israel, said Mr. Weisgal.

A careful combing of the lying water horisons in Israel, said Mr. Weisgal.

A careful combing of the world book market proved fruitless, as the books are out of print. As a last resort, Prof. Chaim L. Pekeris, Head of the Institute's Applied Mathematics. Department, wrote to his astronomer friends in the United States, asking for their assistance in locating these books. The University of Chicago astronomers were the first to reply. They said they could not help, as they too were on the lookout for these rare volumes.

Mr. Weisgal added, "Word came this week from Dr. Lyman Spitzer, Director of Princeton University Laboratory, that he was sending their own set of volumes of the Geophysical Department as a gift to the Weismann Institute Library."
